to me, info

Hi Cathy,

I have attached the grant application and CLAW's IRS determination letter. Our response to Question 5 may be cut off when the pdf is printed, so I am pasting it in its entirety below for reference. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Question 5:

CLAW is a non-profit organization focused on the well being of our local wildlife and their open space habitat. One of the most crucial types of data we can collect is documentation of which species are in a particular area. Identifying critical habitat and corridors leads to the public benefit of ensuring our local wildlife will continue to thrive, and ecosystem services such as pollination and pest predation will remain intact. Photos can also be used to educate the public about our natural surroundings. An example of CLAW's effective usage of nature cams is when we were able to document the biodiversity in our land acquisition project of 17 acres in Laurel Canyon. In addition to many birds, our camera documented every mammal known to inhabit the Santa Monica Mountains, including an uncollared cougar. Additional cameras will aid us in protecting wildlife as we expand and look towards new acquisition targets. This grant's camera is an upgrade from our previous camera and will include wifi capability. This camera will be placed on public property and the data will provide a public benefit for all residents residing in the eastern Santa Monica Mountains.

Thank you!
